Thank you, having an international border that does not connect to a federal highway has always been an issue for our City and is most unusual and exceptional. The fact that we are building a new crossing that connects to a new highway system is clearly a physical demonstration to the logical one that a city should not be the brunt of international traffic and needs support for our current failures of the past when the federal government abandoned a highway in a farmers field because of a jurisdictional problem with the province. What we have seen over the last number of years is a concentrated attempt to correct problems of the past, this clearly fits.

Brian

Q&A Live now; but here are the prepared remarks.

He went off script a bit; but this is what was delivered (mostly).
